Lesson Learned

Yellowcard

It's six in the morning, you still haven't slept yet
You're tired from all yesterday
But all you can do is just try to wake up
And prepare for what tomorrow will bringIt's cold out, it's raining, no one to complain
Just wishing the time will go by
Sitting here anxious a touch too ambitious
So tell me what time do we endThis on going process
'Cuz someday, you'll have to begin
Working your ass off while they sit relaxingDo the same thing day after day
Working only 'cuz I do it the right way
And soon these things will change
You lost all you live in the world underneathDo the same thing day after day
Working only 'cuz I do it the right way
And soon these things will change
You lost all you live in the world underneathWoke up this morning, you realized it's okay
You're taking some time to just look at the sky
The sun is still shining
I realize that life isn't working from 6
And not thinking twiceYou still got your brain and
You still got your life
But your running out of things all the time
Misunderstaments about how we live
Running around all the timeOne day these thoughts will come together
One day this shit will work out fine
It's just like they said it but it seems like forever
Yes, I'm distorted a blur in your mind
And the ever race you run, it's only with yourself
Overcome the obstacles you just, you need, you
Nobody else
