

Garden Walls

Mindy Gledhill

The lights within Jerusalem are gone.
There is one who will not sleep at all.
He will call upon the powers of heaven, deep within the garden's walls.

A voice breaks through the silence in the night.
The grounds shake to hear a grown man cry.
Oh he cries and feels the sting of death inside, but he won't ask why.

Through the years and across the deep blue sea comes this mystery.
Where the king of heaven and earth bow down to free me.

Footsteps in the sand are drawn nigh.
And raging voices echo in the sky.
Angry eyes can't see that the man they sent to die offers life.

Through the years and across the deep blue sea, comes this mystery.
Were the king of heaven and earth bow down to free me.
Two thousand years and across the deep blue sea, the king of all creation came to free me.

The lights within the city now are gone.
But there is one who can not sleep at all.
I will answer to the voice that ever calls from those garden walls.
