

Older

Birdy

I wish that I was older,
Old enough to be yours. And I wish that I was wiser,
Wise enough to be strong minded,
To keep up with the words you say,
That make me feel so young. But I don't know where this is going,
I've just been hoping.
And I can see by your smile that you're glowing,
Inside out.
Let's not pretend like it's not what it is,
When I'm just starting to realise
That I love you. And I wish that we were strangers,
Strange enough to go unnoticed,
From this crowd. And I wish that we were closer,
Close enough for me to hold you,
When you're lonely nights become too long to bare. But I don't know where this is going,
I've just been hoping.
And I can see by your smile that you're glowing,
Inside out.
Let's not pretend like it's not what it is,
When I'm just starting to realise
That I love you. You hold your head up high,
Though it's hard to
I can't keep back I know,
I just want you. But I don't know where this is going,
I've just been hoping.
And I can see by your smile that you're glowing,
Inside out.
Let's not pretend like it's not what it is,
When I'm just starting to realise
That I love you.
I love you.
