subtle boy

Suzanna Choffel

Today I awoke with your name on my dreams painted in purple ink
And I wondered awhile, what is it about your style, that makes me sing
Is it the ice inside your eyes, or the lights beneath your skin
Of all of the things you could possibly say But instead you hold within
Your a subtle body
A subtle boy
A subtle thing
A subtle joy
And I like the way you move me
And I am an obvious girl
With my head stuck in a pearl
But I like the way I'm moving
How could they compare
All those fools who came before
See you are just like me
You see things the way they could be seen
But you make them so much more
Some people waist a lifetime
With someone who shuts them down
But how could I possibly shut
When I am so very opened up
By the love you bring around
Your a subtle body
Your a subtle boy
A subtle thing a subtle joy
And I like the way you move me
And I'm that obvious girl
With my head stuck in a pearl
But I like the way I'm moving
I'll get lost, and then,
I will find my way
find my way
back to your arms again
I'll get lost and then
I will find my way

find my way
