

The Candle

King Diamond

Seven years have gone
It can no longer be left undone
The candle must burn again And pain must follow the unholy flame
So burn, burn, burn
And free the spirit from its chain Here I am blinded again by that flame
In every candle that I burn, burn
I see that same face return, it returns Eyes in pain, my little queen, are you a dream?
In every candle that I burn, burn
I see that same face return, it returns Time has come for you to tell the truth
What shall I do? The tears are running from her eyes
If she could only tell me why? You don't tell me why The Jonah, the Jonah With twisted key, she speaks a word to me
And then I see her face falling apart
The word Jonah is her mark, she's branded
