

'Til You Come Back Home Again

Jesse Colin Young

You say you're leaving in an hour or so
Honey you know it hurts me every time you go
A sudden loneliness I know will grow
Until you come back home again.

CHORUS:

There will be no laughter in the bright sunshine
There will be no healing in the hands of time
There will be no sweetness in this life of mine
Until you come back home again.

You lean your suitcase up against the wall
Just like my future, it looks very small
I try to hide the tears I know will fall
Until you come back home again.

CHORUS

You turn to me, I see you try to smile
Honey I know that looking back is not your style
You let me hold you for a little while
And then you're gone once again.

CHORUS

Lyrics Submitted by Valerie Stern

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnlyrics.com/>