Let the Devil Get His Turn

Brent Loveday

You came crashing in like lightening, thrown down from the sky.
So electrifying you could never be denied.
And my life changed before my eyes without a second look.
And Im glad I held my breath through the depths that I've been took.
Our love light shone until you moved on and left me in the dark.
Behind I stayed to rue the day that you cursed me with your mark.
And I've read what the scripture said concerning pride and shame, but its just as well cause Id risk hell to hear you moan my name.
And a cold wind blows everywhere I dwell.
Your farewell keeps ringing in my head like a church bell.
You said Id never learn, and I was born to burn, and all you were to me was company till the devil gets his turn.
Let the devil get his turn.
You came crashing in like lightning, thrown down from the sky.
So electrifying you could never be denied and my life changed without a second look.
Im glad I held my breath through the depths that I've been took.
My love light shone until you moved on and left me in the dark.
Behind I stayed to rue the day that you cursed me with your mark.
And I've read what the scripture said concerning pride and shame, but its just as well cause Id risk hell to hear you moan my name.
And a cold wind blows everywhere I dwell.
Your farewell keeps ringing in my head like a church bell.
You said Id never learn, and I was born to burn, and all you were to me was company till the devil gets his turn.
Let the devil get his turn.
Let the devil get his turn.
Let the devil get his turn.
Yea, let the devil get his turn.
