

Black Stone Wielder

Candlemass

The rain kept on falling and darkened the sky
the dawn was to come with the sunrise Revealing the shadows that passed through the mist the torchlight was flickering, the storm was chasing them on A procession of dark coats followed the star foretold to come since ages In silence they walked on Crossing the lands
On their way to Bethlehem, to break the chains of the spell Stone, they worshipped the stone
In generation from father to son A star, a star is to come to light them way to the one who is born The leader he knelt there to greet the newborn holding his pendant before him Teardrops were falling from his eyes as he said
