Set in Stone

Brian McFadden

She sat me down and told me how
My eyes reveal a secret now
You're souls been hiding in a cloud
So scared of changeYour heart has got to learn to cry (to shed a tear)
Before it grows it's wings to fly (away from here)
Everything must fade and die to move it onListen to your heart
And let it blow your world apart
Then you must go it alone
And keep searching for home
Remember nothing's ever set in stoneThank you for the good advice (you gave me then)
Before I wouldn't have thought twice (I was so young)
I'm melting through the frozen ice
My spring is near
And it's so clearWhat it is I have to do (to save my skin)
Bow my head and battle through (the shit I'm in)
And I'll be standing there with you
All because you saidListen to your heart
And let it blow your world apart
Then you must go it alone
And keep searching for home
Remember nothing's ever set in stoneOpen up your eyes
And you might keep your dream alive
So when you've finally flown and your resistance has grown
Then you'll know nothing's ever set in stoneYou can turn back the clock but you don't need to
It's never too late to fix you lifeOpen up your eyes
And you might keep your dream alive
So when you've finally flown and your resistance has grown
Then you'll know nothing's ever set in stone
Nothing's ever set in stone
