The Grass Is Always Greener

Say Hi

Jenny was from Montana
But she moved to a metropolis
And she lives in a big, blue building
Without any windows, oh no noAnd every night from the sky
Would come handsome winged demons
They were unconcerned with Jenny
But she felt that they should be'Cause the grass is always greener
And the grass is always green
Yeah, the grass is always greener
And the grass is always green
(Alright)
So one day she went out and found a pretty big, ragged boulder
And she saved her strength for days and ate some steaks and legumes too
And she walked up to the demons, and she threw the ragged boulder
And now they spend their eternity tormenting her aloneAnd still, the grass is always greener
And the grass is always green
Yeah, the grass is always greener
And the grass is always green
And the grass is always greener
And the grass is always green
And the grass is always greener
And the grass is always green
(Yeah, it is)
