

I Hate That You're Happy

Tiny Little Houses

Sorry if I ever hurt you
And I never kissed you enough
And I just have trouble unwrapping sometimes
The feelings that I kept locked up
And I know its my own misfortune
And I didn't hold tight enough
But I found it hard to keep myself whole
While drowning in my bitter blood

And I hate when you're with him
And I hate when you smile
And I hate that for once you don't seem like you've cried
And I hate that you've kissed him
And I hate that I'm sore
But most of all I hate that you're happier than before

I'll stay awake again and start feeling
The spot where you used to reside
And I'll lay beneath these cold empty sheet
Huddled and clutching my sides
And I know its my own misfortune
And darling believe me I do
And you've got your problems, and hell I've got mine
But I find it hard that we're through.

And I hate when you're with him
And I hate when you smile
And I hate that for once you don't seem like you've cried
And I hate that you've kissed him
And I hate that I'm sore
But most of all I hate that you're happier than before

And I hate when your with him
And at night you're entwined
And I hate that I have to pretend that I'm fine
And I hate that I miss him but you miss him more
But most of all I hate that you're happier than before
Most of all I hate that you're happier than before.
