

Looking For You

The Lone Bellow

Your break down,
Was easy to see
It took you away,
Further from me.

Shifting through this house and photographs

I think of you,
Much more than I should
More than I should.

And I'm falling down,
Like its holy ground
I'm looking for you again,
I'm looking for you again.

Small regrets
That live in the dark
I've written them down
But I know them by heart.

Counted the cost of this loneliness

I've paid for my crime
And some day I'll die
With you in my mind.

And I'm falling down,
Like its holy ground
I'm looking for you again,
I'm looking for you again.

I'm not letting you go again,
Now letting this story end.
I'm not letting you go again,
Now letting this story end.

Oh we're all not letting you go again

I'm not letting the story end,
Oh I'm not letting you go again,
I'm not letting this story end

And I'm falling down,

Like its holy ground
I'm looking for you again,
I'm looking for you again.
And I can't go without
And there's always down
I'm looking for you again,
I'm looking for you again.
