

Natalia

Nordista Freeze

Yesterday, you said we all were gonna die
Then you laughed, and you took another bite
Of a taco in a taco shell
In some city

We kept talking, but my world, it shifts
I can't think unless I think through this Time is always leaving, leaving me alone again

A broken windshield, collecting drops of rain
I carry forward, but soon I won't sustain The drops connect together and become a tiny seed

So I went walking in the same rain
As it poured, it lifted me away
I floated down the block on a rotten piece of wood

Suddenly, I felt the wood begin to shake
I was sinking straight into my fate
My world turned to darkness
I took my final breath

After a moment, I woke up in the clouds
Left alone, I begin to walk around I came across the brilliance of a giant aeroplane

On the plane, there was strangers and old friends
I found an open seat near the end
Next to a girl
Natalia was her name

A captive beauty changed the channels of the air Elegance of willingness; pure and fair Perfume stained the softest cloth and sweeps into the air

I spent eight hours just thinking what to say
Until the landing called; the clouds swept away
I gathered all my thoughts
And I threw them off the plane

"Excuse me, girl, but there's something in my brain;
if I don't tell you, I think I'll go insane.
You're the prettiest girl
I've ever seen."

Oh, that beauty
I love you

We touched down on the ground of Tennessee
People scattered, quicker than my eyes could see So I, as the only person left aboard the plane

On certain nights, in certain cities where I lay I'm reminded of the clouds and the rain
And all the tragic beauty that still fills my lonely heart

Lists are unchecked; schedules growing full Self-imposed immoral standards and goal All I ever think of is Natalia
