

Enough for Now

The Fray

The daughter's father watches, quietly we assume He's no longer with us, but he left this dusty room

And your name and it's an honor
It's a shame but it's your honor
To take it on your shoulder
'Till you can find another

[Chorus]

That's enough for now
He should have never left you broken
He should have held you
Things your father never could do
That's enough for now
He would have never left you broken
He would have held you
Things your father never told you

The century before you, never could turn twenty-one
Years and years he waited, just watching for a son
Someone to go ahead, to take the name instead
Years and years he waited, and a daughter came instead, but

[Chorus]

Breathing comes in pairs
Except for twice
One begins and one's goodbye

Sixty years of sorrow, he got five or six of bliss
Left my mothers' mother
Without so much as a kiss
As a kiss

But that's enough for now
He never wanted to leave you broken
He would have held you
Things your father never told you
That's enough for now
I would have never left you broken

I would have held you
Words your father never told you

Sixty years of sorrow, you got five or six of bliss
Left my mother's mother
Without so much as a kiss.

Lyrics powered by lyrics.tancode.com written by King, Joseph / Slade, Isaac
Lyrics Â© EMI Music Publishing

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnyrics.com/>