

Life After the War

Tim Chaisson

It's not so bright here in the afterglow
They don't tell you it's twice as hard coming home
I can't sleep and when I close my eyes
I see shadows of the enemy
I let them get the best of me

I miss you more and more
And the way it was before
Our kiss goodbye up on the shore? We lost what I was fighting for
Is this life after the war?

I wrote you a letter every day
Bad as it was, I had something to say
I counted all the reasons I had to stand tall
And to get back to these four walls
Now I don't recognize them at all

I miss the way we dance under the stars
Your eyes lighting up the dark
I know it's not the same but I try so hard
