

Where Idols Once Stood

Thrice

Our idols lay in ruins
We'd have saved them if we could
But we still choose to worship
The places where our idols stood Still believing
They can save us
I've lived this way
Too long to turn back now Presuppositions set in stone
This coffin sealed by my own pride
And though it seems the sun will shine
I'll draw the shades and stay inside If we've learned anything at all
It's that the ghosts of idols
Will do just as well
We all see what we want to anyway, anyway Some things are better left unsaid
You know what's at stake
Some things are better left unsaid As long as we keep it in textbooks
Then we'll be untouchable, untouchable
We hate to lie to children
But after all it's all for their own good
For their own good
