

Therapy

Finger Eleven

Wide awakened out of spinning round the safest orbit
You controlled the ordinary, I was grateful for it
Wide awake in the beginning, trembling after the fall
Only half my world remembers while the other half revolves Cut off 'cause I can't remember, a face that could cut me deeper
But hearts could never leave me bleeding
Becoming the cause and burden, the lesson begins unlearning
And it has never been forgiving, my dear
It's all too familiar, I've been here before
I'll carry this weight for your smallest reward
Because I'll continue to break down the door
Just let me in I swear, it will not be like before
Can't think of what to say, I can't think of what to do
I just think I might be losing my mind
Can't stop this agony, cancel my therapy 'cause
I just thought of you and now I feel fine
Collecting the strangest conscience
Apathy returns it's offense, but only after I get moving
Relax and being the change in time for the newest age
To help me find out what I'm missing in here
It's all too familiar, I've been here before
I'll carry this weight for your smallest reward
Because I'll continue to break down the door
Just let me in I swear, it will not be like before
Can't think of what to say, I can't think of what to do
I just think I might be losing my mind
Can't stop this agony, cancel my therapy 'cause
I just thought of you and now I feel fine
I covered all the grounds
That I'd have cover of design
And every second I have spent
Has come to remind me in time
Wide awakened out of spinning
Round the safest orbit
You controlled the ordinary
I was grateful for it
I was grateful for it
Can't think of what to say, I can't think of what to do
I just think I might be losing my mind
Can't stop this agony, cancel my therapy 'cause
I just thought of you and now I feel fine
Can't think of what to say, I can't think of what to do
I just think I might be losing my mind
Can't stop this agony, cancel my therapy 'cause
I just thought of you and now I feel fine
