Always In Disguise

Peter Himmelman

I had so many dreams that would not fly
They fell like August rain before my eyes
I reached out and they were gone
Like the moonlight in the dawn
The most precious things are always in disguiseLooking back I always seemed unwise
But time has cut my ego down to size
Well that's just the way it goes
When we were young, I guess we just didn't know
The most precious things are always in disguiseAnd time has become my crucible
It's tempered all my vanity and glory
For all that's inexcusable
I want to tell you that I'm sorrySo hold me now and watch as the moon does rise
It's funny that it takes so long just to realize
You could wait a lifetime for a night like this
A thousand years for just one kiss
The most precious things are always in disguise
