

A Day By the Lake

Disillusion

Back at last from yearning slumber when the nightly drama came to a close
Hoping that fall will never come
    Salute the morning sun
    Inviting us to idleness
Hoping that fall will never come
    The hour calls for secrecy silently we'd slip out to the lake
Hoping that fall will never come
    And I stumble as of vertigo Can't await the sound of gentle waves melting with the rhythm of our crave. But today there are only elegies Filling our tainted elysium
Still hoping that fall will never come
    This place turned to a fraud mirage
    Deceitful and untrue.
Still hoping that fall will never come
    Embraces solace me
They hide my tears in pastel drapery
Still hoping that fall will never come
    And I cry just as you
    Knowing, this is coming to an end
But still I am hoping that fall will never come. But it came.
