

heirate mich

Rammstein

You see him creeping around the church
He has been alone for a year
The sadness took away all of his senses
He sleeps every night by her grave
There, by the bells sleeps a stone
And I alone can read it
And on the fence, the red rooster
Who was your heart at that time
The fear has been skewered on this fence
I now go digging every night
To see what still remains
Of the face that smiled for me
There by the bells I spend the night
There between snails, a lonely animal
During the day I run after the night
You escape me for the second time
Marry me with my hands I dig deep
To find what I missed so much
And under the moon in its most beautiful dress
I have kissed your cold mouth
I take you tenderly by the arm
But your skin rips like paper
And parts fall off of you
You escape me for the second time
Marry me so I take what still remains
The night is hot and we are naked
According to the curse the rooster greets the morning
So I hacked off his head

Songwriters

Riedel, Oliver / Lorenz, Doktor Christian / Schneider, Christoph Doom / Kruspe, Richard Z. / Landers, Paul /
Lindemann, Till Published by

Lyrics © Kobalt Music Publishing Ltd., Universal Music Publishing Group Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnyrics.com/>