

The Clocks

Parabelle

She buries the clocks; times wide open like her thoughts
But you still make sense and I feel the weakness in your touch
I am in repair so much that no one cares
Release the charm while I hold my hand over your mouth
I would follow you down if you're still here I can't feel like I'm calling out your name
We'll shake away the memories
I know I feel the way you sin
Just scream I won't surrender This feels like plastic but on my own accord
One day it makes you perfect
A kind of treason that you live for
But my god what have we done I can't feel like I'm calling out your name
We'll shake away the memories
I know I feel the way you sin
Just scream I won't surrender Cross my heart, my lips defend your tongue
My face demands your touch, we fake but not enough
You're gonna burn someday, we're gonna live forever I can't feel like I'm calling out your name
We'll shake away the memories
I know I feel the way you sin
Just scream I won't surrender.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>