California

Low

See your reflection in the mind You keep your revelations wide They knew just where to draw the line You let them got you every timeThough it breaks your heart We had to sell the farm Back to California where it's warmIt fell around you like the stars You picked up everything they dropped And though it breaks you like a song You had some secrets of your ownAnd though it breaks your heart We had to sell the farm Back to California where it's warmIt's warm, it's warmAnd though it breaks your heart We had to sell the farm Nights were just too long With all your children goneWould it keep you strong? If I said it with a song Back to California where it's warm
