Just Kids

Vivian Cook

Got a letter today from a friend who speaks in poetry she brought up some painful memories that they told us time would heal so tell me how I feel and watch the years evaporate suddenly we're all too late again

Well i guess i knew time wouldn't bring any answers still I thought you might have come up with something to say to fill the silences of day who used to fill shoes don't ever ask me what's there to lose there's a lot and they're making numbers out of names as if they were somehow the same it's not a lack, it's just a life left out in the rain too long and there's beauty and truth in that just be careful how far you go cause there's a point of no return so let's move somewhere cheap and just read for like a year, I'll bring the weed you bring the beer and I'll gladly hear you say that we were just kids if you'll explain how that makes any difference
