

...Seeing...

Panopticon

We search so hard in vain
When the answers hold our hands
 They fill our bellies
 They drench the sand
 They pour from the sky
 Their thunders roar
We still search for answers
We must search no more! Disregard dogma
 We've no need to kneel again unless to feel the earth to drink from the streams again Divinity in the forest Drenching the night sky
 Present in all things that grow
 The gods as an archetype
I saw the gods in the eyes of my father on the last day he waved good-bye
I saw the gods staring at the night sky with a friend standing on lake ice
 I saw god in the eyes of my nephew just minutes after his birth
I saw the gods at the end of sumbel when an emptied horn made flames burst!
 I see the gods!
 I see god
