Broken Man

Matt Andersen

you can't take the home from a homeless man you can't take away his streets you can't threaten a man, with nothing to lose or bruise him when he's beat you can't take money from a poor man or scare a man with no fear you can't shame a man with no pride or force a stone to tears what can you do to a broken man
what can you do to a broken man you can't cut a man who's bleeding you can't push a man who's down you can't starve a man who's hungry or loose him when he's found you can't break a man who's broken or cheat a man who knows or kill a dream that's dead and curse it when it goes
what can you do to a broken man
what can you do to a broken man you can't strip a man who's naked you can't defend a man who's lied you can't believe a man who's lost you can't envy a man that's cried you can't lift a man who's risen or teach a man that knows you can't fight a man who's won or heat a fire that burns
what can you do to a broken man
what can you do to a broken man
