Better Alone

Carolina Liar

Don't you hope, we can start again
Endings are old, but they help you see
Can't quite believe all of this and what it means
You become so bitterYou think you're better alone, for the sake of your sanity
It won't hurt a soul, if you just learn to breathe again
You never had the nerve to begin with
You think you're better aloneBeen here before, seeking safety and something to blame
You feel so hollow, you could swear that you've grown
Worth anything as big as your dream
You become so bitterYou think you're better alone, for the sake of your sanity
It won't hurt a soul, if you just learn to breathe again
You never had the nerve to begin with
You think you're better aloneNever had the nerve to begin with
Got to come to your sensesYou think you're better alone, for the sake of your sanity
It won't hurt a soul, if you just learn to breathe again
You think you're better alone
It won't hurt a soul
