Old English 800

Still Life

It came without warning, something I thought wasn't real. These nails in my coffin, a boy who knows not how to feel. Yes love was a stranger, stranger that words can explain. A dry well my emotions, tears with no pity no shame. But I saw the clouds break before my eyes, and drank in the beauty of a clear sky. Can I help you find a genuine smile. Can I protect you, take bullets lay down myself. Spent my life searching for something I found in your eyes. All my life waiting, tangled within my own lies. Patiently wait, you get nothing for nothing. That's all I ever gave, can I give you something that will keep you safe. Is this something more than what you've thrown away. I've never felt like this. I hear songs in your laughter, epics of sorrow and pain. I kissed you while you slumbered, and kissed your check while it rained. Stared into your sad eyes cursing the dawn when it came. Your love has released me from all of my shame. And if ever you need me I'll never be too far away. I want you to believe me, I mean every word that I say. You introduced me to wonder, I wonder if you feel the same. Your love has released me from all of my pain. It's like flowers in spring time, rainbows after a rain. Each smile that you lend me, erases more pain. It came without warning, I thought it could never be mine. I finally found it, a love that will last for all
Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.