

Bitter

Her Vanished Grace

Mother, mother, can you hear me? I keep trying
Just to find me all I know now, all you show me
 Endless questions, hopeless ending
 This bitter pill is pushing me away
And now I feel like there's nothing left to say
 And I pretend to look the other way
But in the end will I be okay? Will I be okay?
Father, father, will you be there as I cry out?
 Silent again, turning colder, frozen deeper
 Numb to this dream sleeping within
Before I face another day, won't you let me stay asleep
Lost among the dreams that always comfort me?
And before I find my feet, won't you show me
 What I need, what I need to walk again?
