Some Minds

Flume

In our home all day I waited for the change,
Something warm that I could say,
But I admit it won't come.
Somehow I don't care,
Though I love the clothes she wears,
and I love her body bare,And so I pray.I pray that it won't feel the same and,
Don't think that I can't see it in your eyes.
Darling, yeah, we both knew it from the start,
Some minds are better kept part.Here I pass the day in a most peculiar way,
Watching ships out in the bay,
And I swallow so hard.
Am I too weak to fight?
As the day becomes the night, and I don't want to be right.And so I pray.I pray that it won't feel the same and,
Don't think that I can't see it in your eyes.
Darling, yeah, we both knew it from the start,
Some minds are better kept apart.
I pray that it won't feel the same and,
Don't think that I can't see it in your eyes.
Darling, yeah, we both knew it from the start,
Some minds are better kept apart.
