No One Is Free

Still Life

Open my eyes I can see the lives of the millions that need to be free. Open my heart and I can feel the pain of the lives who's oppressions are real. Pain of the millions of innocent victims you and me we're just chained to a system striving just for ourselves we'll never see when lives are oppressed no one is free. So overwhelmed we don't want to help because we're to busy oppressing ourselves leave the problems in our leaders hand while their killing off people in far off lands enforcement of freedom is what they said how can that help when more just end up dead. Tell me what you don't see and show me what you don't know it's not your pain so you don't feel it's not your life so it's not real. I oppose your hate I oppose your war so many will die tell me what for. African people locked up in cages but we're used to it it's gone on for ages the need to be above equality the need to feel superiority is tearing us down and we wont return if this hate keeps building the world will burn dividing us up by our races judging what's inside by our faces gets so confusing it's hard to tell what's right inside I know better than to
