Congratulations, I Hate You

Alesana

No one ever said that life was fair And I'm not saying that it should be So knowing that you are where you want to be And I'm not comes as no surpriseBut don't expect me to be happy for you And don't smile at me And tell me things will work out for me too I don't want your pity, I hate your pityTaste your vanity, its sweet bitterness As you hide behind your veil Of my stolen hopes and lost dreams You took them all I watched you steal my thoughts And had to see you smileAs you build your dreams On my shattered hopes I'll look back on a day once loved And fantasize for tragedy Swallow your prideBeg me to make this easier And listen to my hopeless criesSuffer alone in emptiness I lust to see you swallowed By the mess that you left in your wake Disgust lies deep within your empty gazeBeg me to make this easier And listen as my hopeless cries Send stares into your meaningless eyesMy envy can't describe How I loathe you for having all the stars Leaving my eyes to marvel The sky knowing it should be mineYet it's you I see Wasting the dream that only I deserve I'll tear off your face to see your smileAs you build your dreams On my shattered hopes I'll look back on a day
