

Today I've Lost You

Take That

Driving home in my car, nearly midnight
Rain on the road in my view
Holding my heart, its the first night without you
On my clothes I still smell your perfume Should have called, when I left you were crying
Is it too late to apologize
From talking to fighting, admitting, denying
To finally saying goodbye Now I regret every word that was spoken
I said some things you know I didnt mean
Maybe well turn back the time, work it out, start anew
Oh, maybe today Ive lost you I cant help but think of our last conversation
I close my eyes I can still see your face
I hope what Im feeling now, you are feeling it too
Oh, maybe today Ive lost you Driving faster out on this empty road
Being singles so bad at twenty-three
Looking for signs, asking strangers directions
When the answers right in front of me Strange how a minute can feel like a lifetime
I know what I had, now its gone
I swallowed my pride 'cause alone here, Im dying
And with you is where I belong For twenty-four hours Ive been searching for reasons
Reasons why we should be living apart
Hope Im not too late to come home, work it out, start anew
Oh, maybe today Ive lost you Maybe today, Ive lost you
Maybe today, Ive lost you
