

Pale and Paralyzed

Brown Bird

Leaves on the wall are shaking her down and breaking her mind with unsettling sound courage collapses and uncertainty reigns she tries to summon her strenght to thunder through it again Sinks her teetg into a terrible rage and plunge her fist into the darkneas she's losing her ground in a war being waged the war being waged by madness She's fallen prey to the shadows Caught in the haze with a sad mistake.
Maybe the ground will open Surely the earth will swallow her whole One cracking blow to the temple Doubt takes hold, She's lost control.
Fire persists in the corridor wall She jumps at the sound of each foot falls long and dark cause the journey ahead. at home her body turns and tosses in bed often she thinks she is somebody's need but it's just her own blood rushing in her ear. the force inside her that steers her head toward the beast in the darkness the truth she seeks in the shadows halfway between being alive and dead the devil ia out for her tonight under the moonlit sky above she's frozen in fear of lord and fright and in the bloodshot eyes she sees the moon on high pale and paralyzed
so bright and as white as the bones of a dove.
