

Nothing's Changed Here (Remastered Version)

Dwight Yoakam

I hear you walking across the floor
I think that I'm dreaming
'Til I hear you shut the door I wake up crying an' calling your name
Well nothing's changed here without you
I start every day the same Same old sun comes up to shine
On this old bed, at the same old time
Tell myself the same old lie
I got you off my mind I feel your body lyin' next to me
I reach out in the darkness
You're not there for me to find Well there's only sorrow followed by pain
Nothing's changed here without you
I start every day the same I see your sweet lips softly kiss me goodbye
I taste the salt of my teardrops
As they fall down from my eyes I take a deep breath, but it's only in vain
'Cause nothing's changed here without you
I start every day the same
Yet nothing's changed here without you
I start every day the same
