

Falling Out of Love

John Denver

This is what it's like falling out of love
This is the way you lose your very best friend
This is how it feels when it's all over
This is just the way true love ends
First of all there's no one you can talk to
When there is they just don't seem to hear
Words don't seem to matter much anyway
They can't describe the pain, they can't explain the fear
Then the nights grow cold and hard to live through
And still you hate to see the morning come
'Cause somehow tomorrow doesn't matter much anymore
The future holds no promise, your life's already done
And this is what it's like falling out of love
This is the way you lose your very best friend
This is how it feels when it's all over
This is just the way true love ends
Then you find your heart no longer flutters
And you no longer look through a lover's eyes
'Cause what's to see when the world goes down around you
You simply can't believe it, but it comes as no surprise
'Cause this is what it's like falling out of love
This is the way you lose your very best friend
This is how it feels when it's all over
This is just the way true love ends
What's the sense of failure
It's such an incredible loss
It's all the things you'll never do
And all the dreams that will never come true
This is what it's like falling out of love
This is the way you lose your very best friend
This is how it feels when it's all over
This is just the way true love ends
Oh this is just the way a true love ends
I don't believe a true love ever ends
Oh no, oh no, no, no, no, no
