The Silence

Symphonity

Torn in two, she lies awake
The moon lights up, her room like day
Another night she spends alone
Without his touch her skin's so cold
His blood that's running through her veins
With every beat there's no escape
Lost in everything she trusts
Still can't seem to get enough
Even though the world she loved
It won't ever be the way it was
And his heart of stone left hers breaking
Every night she cries and dies a little more each time
Say you love me
Nothing left inside
Say you love me and the silence will set her free
Memories they take her back
Every moment fades to black
Every kiss and every taste
She wishes time would ease the pain
Even though the world she loved
It won't ever be the way it was
And her heart is week, her hands are shaking
Every night she cries and dies a little more each time
Say you love me
Say you love me and the silence will set her free
And every night she cries
I don't know if I'll ever make this right
'Cause I am just so broken by the bitterness of loneliness
And I'm so scared of this
I don't know if I'll ever make this right
'Cause I am just so broken by the bitterness of loneliness
And I'm so scared
Even though the world she loved
It won't ever be the way it was
And his heart of stone left hers breaking
Every night she cries and dies a little more each time
Say you love me

Say you love me and the silence will set her free
Every night she cries, every night she cries
The silence will set her free
