

See Through You

Kill Your Idols

I question the sincerity of this so called community Are you here because you want to be Or just for popularity Just the other day you told me you'd be there How come then I couldn't find you anywhere Good intentions falling short of empty promises for support A scene just simply cannot bE unless there is true unity Wear the colors, fly the flags They might as well be shredded rags When all is summarized in the end You're just here to impress your friends I can see right through you I can see the difference in what you say and do You only want what you already know Then you wonder Why there's so few shows Just the other day you told me you'd be there How come then I couldn't find you anywhere "Support the scene" & "make the shows" is what you say I guess you had better things to do that day
