The Art

Rachael Lampa

This is all so beautiful but how much of this will really be Enough to keep me on my feet this is how it feels when it's for real
But how much can be invisible enough for me to just believe
And I'm chasing the wind and ending up right where I beganI know that there's an art to starting over again
Knowing God will never waste the pain
You can only try so hard to right a wrong
This song will only last so long
But life takes time so let it live alongI may never know I should just let go
But I we really want a God that I can understand
Still I close my eyes try to reason why
But since when does my desire dominate the plan?
And I'm chasing the wind and ending up right where I beganI know that there's an art to starting over again
And I know that God will never waste the pain
You can only try so hard to right a wrong
This song will only last so long
Life is just the art of living onAnd life is in slow motion
And when the silence is deafening
Hold on tight, you're gonna cry
But there's always a reason whyI know that there's an art to starting over again
And I know that God will never waste my pain
You can only try so hard to right a wrong
This song will only last so long
But life is just the art of living onIt comes down to the art of living on

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/