Firth of Fifth

Steve Hackett

As daybreak breaks the mist upon the earth
It came to pass that beauty settled there forever more
And as the steam clings close to things to come
It came to pass that solid rock did part for humble lifeOnce upon a time there was confusion
Disappointment, fear and disillusion
Now there's hope reborn with every morning
See the future clearly at its dawning
Forever drifting slowly towards a hazy emptiness
As water slips into the sea
The father's sad to see it freeAs shadows creep towards their master night
It came to pass that trees defied the wind who shook their leaves
And as the peace descended all around
It came to pass that nature's creatures came to face the worldOnce upon a time there was confusion
Disappointment, fear and disillusion
Now there's hope reborn with every morning
See the future clearly at its dawning
Forever drifting slowly towards a hazy emptiness
As water slips into the sea
The father's sad to see it freeOnce upon a time there was confusion
Disappointment, fear and disillusion
Now there's hope reborn with every morning
See the future clearly at its dawningOnce upon a time there was confusion
Disappointment, fear and disillusion

Songwriters
GABRIEL, PETER/COLLINS, PHIL/HACKETT, STEVEN/BANKS, TONYPublished by Lyrics Â© EMI Music Publishing, Sony/ATV Music Publishing LLC, IMAGEM U.S. LLC

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/