

Used to Be

Redemption

Anything we should know about your change? -- I don't know how to finish what's begun,
Or how long I might wonder if it's done
Windows open when the doors are all closed,
But if you step through, you might forget the way back home I was drawn, I was taken over rubicons
All the while never realized I was gone
Windows open where doors were once closed
I step through them, and now I forget the way back home Someone introduce me to the man I used to be
I can feel him struggling deep inside of me
I swear, if it takes until my dying day,
That somehow I will find my way again I have faltered
I have sacrificed everything I once held dear Windows opened when the doors were all closed
I stepped through them and lost my way
Somehow I know I'll be back again
I know I can save myself! Someone introduce me to the man I used to be
I can feel him struggling deep inside of me
I swear, if it takes until my dying day,
That somehow I will find my way
I will find I'm back again
The man I used to be
I will find I'm reconciled with what I've hoped to be
I'll build a bridge to what I've lost,
And I will find my way back home again

Songwriters

MILLER, RONALD N./HIRSCH, KENNETH W Published by

Lyrics © Sony/ATV Music Publishing LLC Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>