

It Will Never Be the Same

Gabriel Kelley

the open road is laying in front of him he's staring down at the borderline all the things he lost he he don't ever want back cause now he's got a new place to find

time was changing
time for a change
and with god willing

the broken bottles
scattered inside the house they wore him down
like his old man's pride his hands were torn from working so damn hard his heavy drinking
and fixing old cars

the lonely nights
have taken him by the throat cause the one he loved she was taken too soon
a man can only make it so far along till his heart turns to black and blue

and no one here has heard from him since he said he left
on a ???
just a suitcase and a guitar to pick yeah I'm sure, that he's doing just fine cause time was changing
