Closure

From Here On

Memories of you fade from my mind
Disappear as I close my eyes
Wishing I could shed a tear, but I feel nothing
Words so meaningless
Hindsight has led me astray once again
Look at the face of a stranger that was once a friend
Drowned in regret, your face I will soon forget
Existence fading, tongue thick with lies
Speak and I hear nothing
Promises so easy, quickly dismissed
Past disappears, present unfolds, future beckons
At this point separate, extinguish all hope to reconcilliate
Your face has forever changed, it will never be the same
