Red Pawn's Race

Belvedere

So far away from west he rose
Another entrepreneur whose dreams have failed
Don't say a word, his ashen nose
You want to hear how mankind's up for sale?
Don't run away while looking back
You're moving forward running twice as fast
What have we done? Extinction's here
The best intentions paved with looking glassAnother push, another pull, why can't we see ideals
That bears responsibility, another bomb that waits to go
I should have been the kind of man portrayed in History books
Instead of the man I'm running from
I never viewed it rationally
I know a road that twists and turns
It's paved with good intentions while it burns
Let's save the world, go back in time
Another paradox could save our lives
It's many miles, like Dyson's past
You can unwind it if you move too fast
The Queen's pace can't slow you down
You're saving all of humanity, we're boundAnother push, another pull, why can't we see ideals
That bears responsibility, another bomb that waits to go
I should have been the kind of man portrayed in History books
Instead of the man I'm running from
I never viewed it rationallyThere is a road I know leads back to the beginning
There is a road I know leads back to the beginning
There is a road I know leads back to the beginning
Another push, another pull, why can't we see ideals
That bears responsibility, another bomb that waits to go
I should have been the kind of man portrayed in History books
Instead of the man I'm running from
I never viewed it rationally
