

Norway

R. Stevie Moore

i had a quick lunch, then i drove off it was a very bizarre departure from your house the weather was beautiful i stopped to call you and you said yes you were nevertheless optimistic of our love, but when you're not around me, i get blue i can't begin describing it to you, no i feel a kind of invisible pain without you there's no reasonable gain norway norway norway i've begun to dwell in misery if only it was you that i could see, though i feel a kind of unthinkable fear there's no desire to live without you here norway norway norway i'm eating breakfast all by myself it is a typically bland existence without you filling the coffee cup
