

Sundays

Daphne Loves Derby

Please tell me how you lift these heavy bricks
And how you built this path for me to walk on Carve yourself in stones with the strength of all convinced
But I know your skin is still as thin as mine And what does it take to believe
In all the things you believe?
And maybe I need to listen more carefully I finally know how you stand
Against the worst there is You enjoy coffee and Debussy
I can't believe the calmness in your bones after everything
And when she dreams she sees herself in her Sunday dress
Humming simple melodies, she's known since she was only three And what does it take to believe
In all the things you believe?
And maybe I need to listen more carefully I finally know how you stand
Against the worst there is
I finally found the strength
You've tried to tell me about Oh, even when the sky is crashing down
You, you locked your knees and stood up straight
You are the strength inside my veins
Oh, I want to feel the strength you know What does it take to believe
In all the things you believe?
And maybe I need to listen more carefully
