Northern Winds

Sacred Indian Chants

Northern winds came whistling through evergreens
Like trains, one temper broods until a temperature breaks
And blooms, smashing and tearing what we've worked toward
One hand will break what the other hand buildsBoard the windows up, keep the cellar locked
We'll feign restraint until it's over and settled
Our wills are just as strong as the walls we built for them
I won't rebuild what I have crumbled, I'm tired, tiredWhat is faith? It's been replaced by insurance policies
Once one thing breaks just have it replaced
Like faith, once whistled through the trees
Now so still, one hand will break what the other hand buildsBoard the windows up, keep the cellar locked
You never know when little fevers could flare up
For ever day it's calm, there must be be something brewing
There's always something storming through these evergreens
Like trainsNorthern winds came
Northern winds came
Crashing and burning down our wills
