

Northern Winds

Sacred Indian Chants

Northern winds came whistling through evergreens
Like trains, one temper broods until a temperature breaks
And blooms, smashing and tearing what we've worked toward

One hand will break what the other hand builds
Board the windows up, keep the cellar locked
We'll feign restraint until it's over and settled

Our wills are just as strong as the walls we built for them

I won't rebuild what I have crumbled, I'm tired, tired
What is faith? It's been replaced by insurance policies
Once one thing breaks just have it replaced

Like faith, once whistled through the trees

Now so still, one hand will break what the other hand builds
Board the windows up, keep the cellar locked
You never know when little fevers could flare up

For ever day it's calm, there must be something brewing

There's always something storming through these evergreens

Like trains

Northern winds came

Crashing and burning down our wills
