

Chills

Down with Webster

I fell, like soldiers on the front line.
Under your spell, in the magic you inspire.
Every farewell, sets me on fire
And I find it all so funny,
Like a joke without a punchline. My heart's racing, trying to catch up to you,
The light that you let off is gold.
I can't shake this feeling it fills the room,
These chills didn't come from the cold.
They came from you.
They came from you. I hear your voice like an ocean,
Washing over me I'm frozen stuck in time.
And I swear, I never seen the likes of you before.
And I promise this ain't difficult, doesn't happen every night. My heart's racing, trying to catch up to you,
The light that you let off is gold.
I can't shake this feeling it fills the room,
These chills didn't come from the cold,
They came from you.
They came from you. My world came crashing down right under you,
These chills didn't come from the cold,
They came from you. See I was doing my own thing 'till you came across my path,
Made me feel like singing, but usually I rap.
But how can I explain the things you do to me,
I'm acting all the proper words and phrases,
Hold up lemme get back to that,
Because I'm awe struck, star struck,
Turned around from my hard luck
Let you know that from bar one,
You are the one and that's bar none,
I'll try the best to control myself,
At least that's what I told myself,
But inside I just bought a farm,
You're the one that just sold that house,
Got my heart in that headlock,
I'm hosing on and you hold the belt,
I mean this in the best way when I tell you that you're cold as hell
That makes no sense, but neither does this feeling,
I know that my time is short, but next to you, I touch the ceiling. My heart's racing, trying to catch up to you,
The light that you let off is gold.
I can't shake this feeling it fills the room,

These chills didn't come from the cold.
They came from you.
They came from you. My world came crashing down right under you,
These chills didn't come from the cold,
They came from you.
