The Easy Part

Chuck Wicks

Sometimes love aint enough And theres times just giving up is alright No matter how much you want it to work Someones gonna get hurtSometimes it aint about whos wrong And as bad as you wanna hold on The right thing to do is to get out right now Before its too lateAnd the hardest part of leaving is picking up the keys And finding the nerve to start that car The first night is the longest, youre waking up alone And you find out how strong you really are But the rest is the easy partBefore long, the phones gonna ring and youll want To answer his call, but girl dont Have the same conversation over and over So let it be overThe hardest part of leaving is picking up the keys And finding the nerve to start that car The first night is the longest, youre waking up alone And you find out how strong you really are But the rest is the easy partTheres an open road, theres a life ahead But even though you cant see it yet Ooh, just take a chancePick up your keys, oh, and find the nerve Yeah, start your car, the rest is the easy partYeah, the hardest part of leaving is picking up the keys And finding the nerve to start that car The first night is the longest, youre waking up alone And you find out how strong you really are But the rest is the easy partRest is the easy part
