

The Prisoner

Howard Jones

You have watched me, safe in your anonymity
I have dreamed you, held in your security
Some people believe a photograph traps your mortal soul
Your eyes are the camera and you've taken hold And you captured me
I need you to take control
I am a prisoner of no confidence
You've entered me now make me whole Every place I go, I feel your lenses trained on me
This distant concentration takes away my energy
Your image burns it's negative behind my waking eyes
Then the night comes and you stalk your prize And you captured me
I need you to take control
I am a prisoner of no confidence
You've entered me now make me whole Some people believe a photograph traps your mortal soul
Your eyes were the camera and you've taken hold And you captured me
I need you to take control
I am a prisoner of no confidence
You've entered me now make me whole
